HILL ROAD STRATHAVEN

A PHOTOGRAPHIC PROJECT STORY

Existing conditions · work in progress · completed interiors

PROJECT STORY

A documented transformation

The photographs supplied for Hill Road record a clear sequence: the original condition of the property, areas opened up for work, progressive renewal of the interiors and the final presentation of the completed rooms. This edition follows that visible sequence without adding claims that are not supported by the project record.

THE STARTING POINT

Existing rooms and circulation

The early photographs show the property before renewal: dated finishes, worn floor coverings and rooms requiring a coordinated programme of improvement. Recording this starting point makes the scale of change legible and provides context for the completed result.

PREPARATION

Opening up and assessment

Selected areas were stripped back and opened up. The photographs reveal wall surfaces, ceiling zones and service routes, allowing the work to proceed from the actual condition of the building rather than from appearance alone.

SERVICES

Work behind the finish

The visual record includes work to pipework and heating equipment. These less visible stages sit behind the finished rooms and demonstrate the importance of sequencing practical building services before decoration and final presentation.

PROGRESS

Rooms taking shape

As the project advanced, repaired surfaces, renewed flooring, darker joinery details and new lighting began to establish a consistent interior language. The photographs show a measured progression rather than a jump from before to after.

FINISHES

A coherent visual identity

The completed scheme uses light wall finishes with strong dark accents at doors, skirtings and feature elements. Warm metallic and timber tones add contrast, while the repeated palette connects individual rooms into one coherent home.

KITCHEN

A practical renewed space

The finished kitchen is presented as a bright, organised working area. Pale cabinetry, grey work surfaces and tiled splashbacks create a restrained, durable composition with clear storage and preparation zones.

LIVING SPACES

Character retained and refreshed

The final living areas balance period character with a cleaner contemporary finish. Existing focal points remain prominent, while refreshed surfaces, flooring and a consistent colour palette give the rooms a composed and purposeful feel.

BEDROOMS

Calm, finished interiors

The bedrooms complete the same visual story: bright walls, crisp dark details and carefully presented finishes. Multiple viewpoints in the supplied set confirm continuity across the rooms rather than a single isolated reveal.

BATHROOM

Clean lines and useful storage

The completed bathroom is shown with a light finish, turquoise splashback accents and integrated storage. Its straightforward arrangement supports daily use while remaining consistent with the refreshed character of the wider property.
